An Unpredictable Cornucopia of Books Set in Space

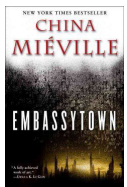

Invaders : 22 tales from the outer limits of literature edited by Jacob Weisman

"This...anthology from Jacob Weisman collects an intriguing set of short stories from authors not typically associated with science fiction." -The Verge

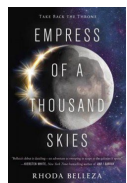

All Systems Red (The Murderbot Diaries #1) by Martha Wells

"Wells imbued Murderbot with extraordinary humanity, and while this is a fun read, don't make the mistake of thinking it's not a profound one." -LA Times

Embassytown by China Miéville

"China Miéville knows what kind of novel he's writing, calls it by its name, science fiction, and exhibits all the virtues that make it an intensely interesting form of literature." -The Guardian

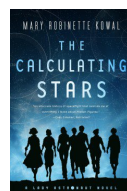

Empress of a Thousand Skies by Rhoda Belleza

"Intergalactic political intrigue, family betrayal and coveted thrones feature in this space opera story...an important and relevant novel." -New York Times

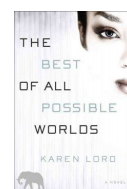

The Martian : a novel by Andy Weir.

"Sharp, funny and thrilling, with just the right amount of geekery." -Kirkus Reviews

The Calculating Stars by Mary Robinette Kowal.

"The Calculating Stars is a rich, enjoyable story....full of likeable characters, sly humour, and a plot that deftly interweaves end-of-the-world action with thoughtful personal politics." -Tor.com

The Best of all Possible Worlds : a novel by Karen Lord.

"An engrossing picaresque quest, a love story, and a moving character study. Lord is on a par with Ursula K. Le Guin." -The Guardian
